To the Future Employer of Mary Prince:

Let me take a moment to provide some context as to why I would say you are lucky to have Mary Prince joining your team. As a key member of SJV's International Operations team, Mary was an invaluable member of that team. During her tenure here at SJV, she acquired a vast working knowledge of the complex inner workings of how to conduct background screening in over 200 countries throughout the world. While that specific knowledge may not be relevant for the role she will perform on your team, it speaks to her incredible capacity and velocity for learning complex topics.

Mary led numerous projects to execute both her own creative ideas for improving the business as well as other's ideas she delivered with the same zeal and professionalism. Using her project management and communication skills, she had to work cross functionally with client services, information technology, product development and quality to develop and execute key business improvements. Her leadership and efforts delivered numerous material improvements to the business.

At times, Mary stepped into International Operations Director's shoes to lead the overall team – including several protracted periods. During those periods, she would work directly with myself and other senior leaders of our company. While serving in this capacity, we were uniquely impressed with how well she represented herself and SJV which included meeting critical company customers.

Mary was with SJV since 2012, and throughout that entire time she has had the full respect of all she interacted with. Mary's future is taking her in new directions and at a pace that we weren't able to support. While we will miss her terribly, I could not be prouder of her for embarking on this new journey.

So let me close by congratulating you on adding her to your team. And if you are still in the consideration mode, I would suggest that team members like Mary don't come along every day. Her level of commitment and loyalty will be hard to match. More importantly her contributions will be numerous and meaningful.

Warm Regards

Bill Wilder
